

The Fort Wayne News Sentinel's Kevin Leininger asks

*Whatever happened to Ronald Reagan's "conservative revolution"? How did his once-dominant Grand Old Party become so irrelevant at the federal level, and what must it do to reverse that trend?*He concludes the article with this:

In a country that seems increasingly filled with people and even whole industries eager to be protected from all possible harm, can the traditional Republican message of individual responsibility and freedom - including the freedom to prosper or fail - still resonate with a majority of voters?

It will be up to Pence, Souder and others like them to fan those embers into flames. If they can.
